

AYLESBURY GRAMMAR SCHOOL

CODE OF CONDUCT FOR YEAR 13 AT EXAMINATION TIME

We encourage celebration with the barbecue, but practical jokes will not be tolerated.

In particular, eggs, flour, foam and water pistols are strictly prohibited. There are three reasons for this.

- It is unfair to burden caretaking staff with unnecessary cleaning
- It is unacceptable to disrupt the education of the rest of the school
- It may lead to acts of criminal damage

Practical jokes with cars, either on site or nearby, are unacceptable, and any damage done may be reported to the police as criminal damage.

Anyone who is found to have disregarded these rules is liable to incur action from the school. This action may be the withdrawal of all future support from the school, including support for A level re-marks, support for those who do not get the grades they need to enter their chosen university or employment, and refusal to support any future applications for higher education or jobs.

In more serious cases, in addition to bringing in the police, students may be excluded. This may lead to an inability to sit an A level examination.

Universities and employers may also be contacted.

This code of conduct applies not only on the last days before study leave, but even after your last examination. The school's policy is very clear:

Enjoy yourselves, celebrate, but do so in a civilised and adult manner.
