

MARK ANDREWS

(Lee 1980)

Mark is a Consultant Orthopaedic Surgeon at York Teaching Hospitals Foundation Trust and has a special interest in both primary and revision hip and knee replacement surgery.

“I studied Physics, Chemistry and Biology at A Level and remember Mrs Taylor who was gifted to teach with much enjoyment.”

“After completing my A Levels I went on to study Medicine at St George’s Hospital School in London.”

Mark trained in London and Yorkshire and then undertook a fellowship in Revision Hip and Knee Surgery in Leeds before taking up a consultant post at Scarborough Hospital in 1997.

“My earliest jobs were in London before I escaped to Tanzania as Medical Officer for Frontier, the Society for Environmental Exploration where I helped map coral reefs, count insects and find road routes through the Selous Game Reserve. I completed my training in Yorkshire and settled as an Orthopaedic Surgeon in Scarborough on the North Yorkshire Moors and Coast.”

“I love fixing bones and have served time as Trust Medical Director. I continue to enjoy the outdoors, especially the sea, and whilst indoors have learnt to replace hips without cutting any muscles. What could be more enjoyable...?”

“I remember dissections, Bunsen burners and Physics MCQ’s. I got the grades to get to Medical School so I must have learnt something but my main overriding memories are of having fun. Science should be fun.”
